

Special Interest Satellite Symposium Proposals

Submit your proposals for Special Interest Satellite Symposia for IPVC 2024. Submission opens August 15, 2023!

The IPVS welcomes suggestions for special interest satellite symposia for the IPVC 2024 in Edinburgh. Following the deadline, there will be a review process and the Scientific Committee will choose which sessions to include as part of the scientific program.

The 2024 conference theme is “Equitable, Evidence-Based Approaches to HPV Disease” and through workshops, invited lectures, and oral and poster sessions, the conference will cover papillomavirus (PV)-related topics from basic science to global health impact. We will be paying special attention to HPV prevention and control in populations that are most vulnerable to HPV disease worldwide, including those in Low- and Middle-Income Countries.

The proposer of the satellite should ensure that proposed chairs and speakers should be agreeable and available to participate in principle although it should also be made clear that, until review and assessment by the IPVC committee, no proposals will be guaranteed a session given only a finite number of slots are available. Only the Proposer will receive a notification on the results of his submission.

For more information and to submit your Proposal for a Special Interest Satellite Symposium please click the link here. The Organizers and the IPVS will not cover any registration fees, accommodation or travel expenses for Special Satellite Symposium Sessions’ Chairs and Speakers.